I have been providing Clinical supervision since the mid-nineties. It is my favourite work these days. I feel it is time in my career to give back. It is a privilege to assist newer therapists/counsellors in finding their own unique journey in this field. Clinical supervision is, in part, about finding an ethical path forward. The ethical challenges that stump us are not usually the big, obvious ones, but often the smaller, complex challenges that tend to leave us baffled. At those times, we need someone to talk with to help find a path forward. Clinical supervision can help with this goal.

However, clinical supervision is not just about ethical dilemmas, it is also about finding one's own, unique approach and path through this field. Clinical supervision helps with that purpose. If you are interested, contact me for a free initial consult. Would be happy to chat with you.
