I am a client care coordinator with Fraser Health and a faculty instructor with City University of Seattle Master's in Counselling Program, where I teach Counselling Psychology Theory, Substance Use and Addictions, and Clinical Supervision. I am also a faculty member with the Continuing Education Department at Douglas College where I teach Cognitive Behavioral Therapy.

Currently, my main focus in private practice is working with adults living with Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder. My second area of focus is working with couples experiencing relationship issues. My third area of focus is working with clients living with substance use and addictions.

Given that I have 18 years of experience working in mental health and substance use, as well as teaching a clinical supervision course to graduate students, I am equipped to provide supervision to supervisees with a primary focus working with clients impaired by mental health, substance use and interpersonal relationship issues.
