I am a registered clinical counsellor with a community-based social worker background serving immigrant couples, families, international students, and refugee claimants for 40 years. I have been doing individual and group supervision since 1995 for social workers and counsellors, teaching at several universities and colleges. I have been doing regular clinical practices and providing Satir Coaching and Mentoring Training internationally. I see supervision as a helping relational and gift exchange process. My orientation to supervision is an integrated strengths-based approach and Satir Transformational Systemic Therapy. I see a supervision relationship as co-creating a space with supervisees enhancing experiential personal growth to meet the needs of a therapeutic relationship and maintain a healthy and ethical practice. It is a self-reflective and lifelong learning journey together. Feel free to contact me for a free consultation.
