I am a retired clinical counsellor (since 2018) having worked for 31 years with South Island Centre for Counselling and Training. I was the Director of Services for that non-profit agency for most of those years. In my counselling practice I saw individuals, couples and families around a variety of issues.

I was responsible for overseeing and supervising contract counsellors, practicum students and volunteer counsellors in my role as the director. Since retirement I have volunteered at South Island Counselling supervising some of their intern practicum students.

I have also continued to teach a 12-week course on Bowen Family Systems Theory at that centre on a yearly basis primarily for their interns which includes group supervision. I meet with several other supervisors from that agency periodically for peer consultation.
