Drawing on a rich and diverse background that encompasses extensive experience in education, business, and mental health, I offer a uniquely multifaceted approach to clinical supervision. This comprehensive blend of expertise, which also includes my role as a sessional instructor in school counselling at Simon Fraser University, allows me to integrate varied perspectives and methodologies, thereby enriching the supervisory process and enhancing the professional development of those I guide. My approach leverages insights from different fields to address complex clinical issues effectively and support the growth of counsellors and counselling interns in a holistic and impactful manner.

In supervision, I emphasize:

1. Skill Enhancement: Building proficiency in chosen therapy modalities.
2. Talent Integration: Incorporating pre-existing skills into the counselling process.
3. Ethical Adherence: Navigating association ethical codes and ensuring client care standards.
4. Awareness Balance: Aligning the counsellor's technical skills with personal insight.
5. Practical Development: Advancing skills related to client management, including assessment and documentation.
6. Egalitarian Practice: Employing power-deconstructive approaches in client interactions.
7. Trauma-Informed Competency: Fostering ethical practices in trauma work.

I also provide detailed narratives, offering insights and feedback.
