I am a Registered Clinical Counsellor with over 14 years of experience providing individual, couple, and parenting counselling support. My approach is collaborative, client-centered, and trauma-informed, drawing on evidence-based practices to support clients through life's challenges and personal growth.

Alongside my clinical work, I have experience supervising practicum students within a non-profit agency, supporting their professional development, ethical practice, and clinical skills. I have also facilitated peer clinical supervision groups for counselling colleagues, fostering reflective practice, case consultation, and collaborative learning.

As a Chinese Canadian counsellor, I am particularly passionate about supporting counsellors working with Asian and Chinese individuals and families. I bring an understanding of cultural values, intergenerational dynamics, immigration experiences, identity, and acculturation challenges that may influence both clients and clinicians. As a clinical supervisor, I strive to create a supportive and inclusive environment where developing counsellors can build confidence, cultural humility, self-awareness, and clinical competence.
