I am a Registered Social Worker, Registered Clinical Counsellor, Approved Clinical Supervisor (ACS), and social work educator with extensive experience supervising clinicians and students across community mental health, health care, government, and post-secondary settings.

My supervision style is collaborative, reflective, and grounded in the belief that clinical confidence develops through curiosity, critical reflection, and supportive relationships. I strive to create a space where supervisees feel safe to ask difficult questions, embrace uncertainty, and deepen their clinical reasoning without fear of judgment. I have a particular interest in supporting social workers transitioning into psychotherapy, early-career clinicians, and those seeking to strengthen their case conceptualization, therapeutic presence, and professional identity.

Drawing on my experience as both a therapist and social work educator, I encourage supervisees to look beyond the individual, considering how relationships, culture, identity, and the broader social systems that shape people's lives inform both the therapeutic process and our work as clinicians.
