I am Dr. Taraneh Moazzeni, PhD, RCC-ACS, CCC, and CCS, with over 12 years of experience in clinical practice, university teaching, and professional training. I have taught psychology and counselling at well-established universities in Iran and have extensive experience providing clinical supervision to counselling students, emerging practitioners, and internationally trained professionals.

My supervisory work supports both students developing foundational clinical competencies and practitioners preparing for professional registration and independent practice. Key areas of supervision include advanced case conceptualization, treatment planning, ethical decision-making, risk assessment, clinical documentation, professional boundaries, and the development of a confident and accountable professional identity. I provide a rigorous, reflective, and culturally responsive supervisory environment that connects academic knowledge with the complexities of real-world clinical practice.

My goal is to help supervisees strengthen their clinical judgment, ethical competence, professional confidence, and readiness for high-quality independent practice. Supervision is available in English and Farsi/Persian.
