Erica is a Registered Clinical Counsellor who has worked in the anti-violence for over two decades. Her career has included working in transition houses, women's counselling programs, and providing counselling to children, youth, and families. Over the years, she has had the opportunity to work alongside people through some of the most difficult and complicated times in their lives. This experience has shaped her approach as a clinician and, more recently, as a leader and mentor.

Today, Erica works in leadership roles where she supports and mentors' staff, providing guidance around clinical practice, challenging cases, professional development, and the realities of doing this work. She also maintains a private practice, where she works with individuals and couples.

For Erica, supervision is an extension of the mentoring work she has been doing throughout her career. She understands the importance of having someone to turn to when the work feels complicated, uncertain, or challenging. She aims to create a supervision relationship where clinicians can bring their whole selves to the conversation.
